Budget deficit. Cuts affecting workers in administrative and support fields

MORGAN MODJESKI
morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

The University of Saskatchewan will be laying off up to 100 employees in upcoming weeks in an attempt to reduce its projected $44.5-million operating-budget deficit.

A release issued from the U of S said the job losses will impact both unionized and non-unionized employees in administrative and support positions across campus.

Recent layoffs of 40 employees at the university in January and February resulted in $2.3 million in annual savings. The school said it will announce the amount saved from the upcoming layoffs once they are completed.

"To maintain our current financial sustainability and streamline our university, we must adjust our workforce," said associate vice-president of human resources Barb Daigle in a press release. "We continue to make changes that are strategic, respectful of people, sustainable, and that will ensure positions are aligned with the university's teaching, research and outreach priorities."

The release said the U of S will continue to hire while it works through the changes and implements a longer-term workforce strategy, but it noted new hires will be "carefully considered and focused in priority areas."

U of S president Ilene Busch-Vishniac said the cuts are not connected to recent funding outlined in the 2013-14 provincial budget.

"I am very appreciative of the province's investment in the University of Saskatchewan, and much of the funding is close to my expectations," she said.

Salaries and benefits account for about 75 per cent of total operating-budget expenses and many administrative processes are being streamlined to create efficiencies and savings.

The U of S is also conducting a formal review of all its academic and administrative programs for "efficiency, effectiveness and alignment with institutional priorities."

Colder weather cools Saskatoon housing sales

To sell or not to sell.
Sales fell 12 per cent compared to February of last year

MORGAN MODJESKI
morgan.modjeski@metronews.ca

With seasonal temperatures well below average, the long winter is wreaking havoc on more than just residents' shovelling muscles, as the city's real-estate market also took a hit.

Saskatoon saw house sales drop in February by roughly 12 per cent compared to last year and Jason Yochim, the executive officer with the Saskatoon Region Association of Realtors, said the snow and lack of spring is a contributing factor.

"It does play a role," he said. "I think we've had such a long winter going back to the third week of October, that psychologically, people have either checked out and go on vacation or they decide they're just going to wait until spring to get into that mode of buying."

He explained spring is one of the busiest times of the year for the housing market, as a number of people will wait until the snow starts to melt to put their home up for sale. However, for those who don't have the option of waiting for the spring melt to buy, he said buyers should be ready to ask questions if they're looking at homes half covered in snow.

"Real estate agents that have been in the market awhile are very familiar with the neighbourhoods, the homes in those neighbourhoods and if there are issues with those homes or not," said Yochim.

However, he said it's only a matter of time until sales bounce back.

"The market is going to at least maintain what it did last year and we're looking (at) a five per cent increase over last year for activity," said Yochim.

"I think that was just an anomaly, what happened in February, and we'll be back on track."

Piles of snow can be seen outside of this house up for sale in downtown Saskatoon. The city saw a 12 per cent decrease in year-over-year house sales in the month of February, and some say the long winter has been a contributing factor. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO

NDP questions lack of flood money in budget

Cathy Sproule, NDP house leader
JEFF MACKEY/METRO IN REGINA

The Saskatchewan government says it's hard to predict natural disasters and that's why there's no money in the budget specifically allocated for flooding.

Government Relations Minister Jim Reiter says the province is concerned and preparing for flooding, but not having it as a line in the budget is normal.

"Potentially you could have something in any given year, but you're not sure," Reiter said Monday.

"It's just so completely unpredictable."

The NDP questioned in the legislature why no money has been earmarked for flooding, especially given the warnings.

The Water Security Agency is calling for above normal or well-above normal spring runoff in almost all of the southern half of the province — and it could be worse for some areas. The agency's March forecast calls for very high runoff in areas between Indian Head and Moose Jaw, including Regina, and between Saskatoon and Prince Albert.

"What we know is that over the last three years they've spent over $105 million each year on average for flooding and there's a five-foot snowpack out there," said New Democrat Cathy Sproule.

"So, I don't know how you can't plan for that."

Sproule argues the government budgets for forest fires and should be able to do the same with flooding.

Reiter acknowledges the province budgets for forest fires, but says flooding is different.

"They tend to be more consistent because of lightning strikes," he said.

Back lane recycling, garbage collection suspended

As of Monday back-lane garbage and recycling pickup in the City of Saskatoon has been temporarily suspended.

According to a release from the city, the large quantity of thawing snow in back lanes is making them impassable for the city's large collection trucks and now all back-lane pickup is being moved to front-street only.

Brenda Wallace, manager with the city's environmental services branch, said the suspension of back lane pickup will prevent collection trucks from getting stuck and will help avoid damage caused by the 13,000-pound vehicles driving on soft gravel.

"We understand this change is an inconvenience for some and so we ask residents to help their neighbours who require assistance and we thank everyone for their ongoing patience as we get through these challenging snow-melt conditions," said Wallace in the release.

Residents with back-lane pickup are asked to place their garbage and recycling carts on the front street during their regular collection days.

The city was already experiencing some problems with collection trucks in back lanes. A report submitted to the city's executive committee on March 20 stated that six of the city's vehicles had gotten stuck.

For residents who may have missed a collection day, weekly garbage and recycling collection begins on April 1. METRO

Holy smokes! Israel gets first kosher-certified cigarettes for Passover

Observant Jews in Israel craving a smoke during the weeklong Passover holiday that started at sundown Monday can now enjoy a rabbi-approved puff.

It's the first time cigarettes have joined the long list of goods stringently checked to ensure they comply with Passover rules on what items are kosher for the holiday — meaning they have not come in contact with grains or other forbidden ingredients.

The chief rabbinate in Israel, however, disapproved.

Italy's youth rise to power amid parliamentary chaos

Five Star Movement. Protest party received quarter of all votes

ELISABETH BRAW
Metro World News in Rome

Italy's parliament is suddenly looking like a university auditorium. That's because many of the newly elected parliamentarians are students.

MP Laura Castelli, 26, once tweeted about a journalist who was chasing her: "He thinks we're extraterrestrials."

Demands of office

"Let's hope that the new parliamentarians are a positive force.... One needs not just political will but also experience."

Stefano Folli, respected political columnist at the Italian daily Il Sole 24 Ore

It's true that these new MPs have little knowledge of political proceedings: Most of them belong to the Five Star Movement, Italy's phenomenally successful protest party.

"So many people voted for (leader) Beppe Grillo because they're nauseated by all the recent scandals," said student Luisa Ciaramella, 25, from Naples.

The median age of the Five Star parliamentarians in the lower house is 33 — a world record. Thirty-five of these new parliamentarians are under 30. And, as Grillo recently pointed out on his blog, his MPs are also Italy's best educated.

But while Italy's parliament enjoys an aura of fun rebellion, its problems remain grave.

Five Star has proposed leaving the eurozone, an idea Umberto Ambrosoli of the centre-left alliance called "very dangerous. They're just suggesting it to abdicate themselves from responsibility."

Sadistic, tyrannical, unstable ...

Startling testimony at inquest. Psychiatrist reveals the dark side of Ashley Smith, a teenager who killed herself in her jail cell

A teenage girl who killed herself in her prison segregation cell was highly unstable, showed sadistic tendencies and was one of the most difficult cases he had ever seen, a psychiatrist testified Monday.

Dr. Jeffrey Penn told a Toronto inquest into Ashley Smith's death that only top-quality psychological care could have helped her overcome her extreme problems.

"She presented one of the more severe personality pathologies that I have encountered," Penn said.

Smith, who had been teased mercilessly growing up, was emotionally immature, giggly, took pleasure in inflicting pain on others and had only a limited capacity for remorse, Penn testified.

In some ways, he said, Smith hadn't progressed beyond age two or three. "This young woman is essentially a large tyrannical child who can't tolerate limits, feels estranged and isolated from peers, unloved, unliked, and often hopeless," Penn once wrote.

Despite the various problems, Penn said the mental-health system in prison is "better than people think," although it could be improved.

Smith, however, was simply an extremely difficult inmate and patient.

"She had incredibly poor social skills. She can't get along with peers or with staff," he said.

She also had a strong need for arousal.

"When I'm bad, I get a feeling of excitement," he said she told him.

Italy killing. New trial looms for Amanda Knox?

Amanda Knox is waiting anxiously in Seattle to hear if she'll face a murder court again in Italy.

She was acquitted in the murder of her roommate.

But now Italian prosecutors have asked the high court to throw out the acquittals of Knox and her Italian ex-boyfriend in the murder of 21-year-old British student Meredith Kercher and order a new trial.

After hearing six hours of arguments, the court delayed a decision until Tuesday.

Knox is "carefully paying attention to what will come out," attorney Luciano Ghirga said as he arrived at Italy's Court of Cassation in Rome.

Knox, now 25, and Raffaele Sollecito, who turns 29 on Tuesday, were arrested in 2007 after Kercher's body was found in a pool of blood in a rented apartment in Perugia. Her throat had been slashed.

Flu shots. Do health-care workers need them?

Should mandatory flu shots for health-care workers be put on hold?

A prominent infectious diseases specialist says yes.

Dr. Michael Gardam says he gets a flu shot every year, but thinks mandatory programs for health-care workers could end up being challenged in the courts.

Gardam and a colleague say in this week's Canadian Medical Association Journal that pushing flu shots in this way could undermine other vaccination efforts.

Gardam, head of infection control at Toronto's University Health Network, also worries this type of fight could be used by the anti-vaccination movement.

Flu vaccine proponent Dr. Allison McGeer says a better vaccine would be welcome, but the current one does help to save lives and should be used by health-care workers.

Ottawa. NDP wants RCMP to investigate budget leak

The opposition New Democrats are asking police to investigate a federal budget leak that they say could have allowed insiders to manipulate the market.

NDP deputy finance critic Guy Caron has written to RCMP Commissioner Bob Paulson to say a pre-budget leak into tariff breaks for hockey equipment opened an "opportunity for personal financial gain."

The National Post, followed by the Globe and Mail, both reported last week that the measure would be part of Finance Minister Jim Flaherty's eighth spending blueprint.

The leak was widely interpreted as the Harper government's effort to influence media coverage — and television reports on budget day were indeed filled with kids in hockey gear. Only later did it become clear that the Conservatives had increased tariffs on a much wider array of goods, more than offsetting any tariff cuts to a few popular items.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Precedent

- NDP deputy finance critic Guy Caron says such budget leaks were once taken very seriously, citing the leak under the Mulroney Conservatives in 1989 that led to the resignation of the finance minister and an RCMP investigation.

Ford India apologizes for ad with Berlusconi, bound women

Mumbai. Images that appeared online may never have been seen by anyone at automaker

This ad, depicting Italy's former prime minister Silvio Berlusconi with three bound women in the trunk of a Ford Figo, was created at advertising agency JWT India and appeared on the site adsoftheworld.com. The CEO of JWT India says that it and two similar ads were never paid for and "were not expected to be released." SCREEN GRAB

The Indian unit of Ford Motor Co. has apologized for advertisements decried as demeaning to women, including one depicting Italy's former prime minister Silvio Berlusconi with a trio of bound women in the trunk of a car.

A Ford India spokeswoman said Monday that the company is investigating whether anyone at the automaker ever saw the print ads, which were never used commercially but appeared over the weekend on a website showcasing creative advertising.

The ads caused an uproar online and came just after India passed a new law on violence against women following a fatal gang rape of a student on a bus that prompted mass protests and spotlighted the status of women in India.

Featuring Ford's logo, one ad showed three women bound and gagged in the trunk of an Indian-made compact, the Ford Figo, with Berlusconi smiling from the driver's seat alongside the slogan "Leave your worries behind with the Figo's extra-large boot." Similar ads featured Paris Hilton apparently kidnapping reality-television rivals the Kardashian sisters — all three sisters tied up and one in a bikini — and Formula One driver Michael Schumacher abducting his male racing competitors.

Ford said Monday that it regrets the incident, calling the images "contrary to the standards of professionalism and decency within Ford."

#SORRYNOTSORRY FOR HASHTAGS

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

A friend of mine recently told me she is having trouble coming up with a suitable hashtag for her upcoming wedding. Her social media-savvy guests will want to know what the official wedding hashtag is before they start live-tweeting from the venue and sharing their heavily filtered snapshots all over Instagram. This is a major #firstworldproblem of course, but her panic got me thinking about the symbol's growing cultural relevance.

Twitter first introduced the hashtag concept in 2007 to group conversations and streamline the search function within the micro-blogging site. Today, about one in eight tweets feature words or phrases that are prefixed with a hashtag symbol, which has since been adopted across numerous social media platforms. Google+, Instagram, Tumblr and Pinterest all support the hyperlinking pound sign and soon, rumour has it, Facebook will finally incorporate hashtags into its interface.

The functional marker has evolved into something much more than its developers could have predicted. The symbol has been embraced by inside jokers and revolutionaries alike, and the humble hashtag helps rally individuals together online and in person and has entirely changed the way we watch award shows. We all know the #Oscars Twitter commentary is much more entertaining than the actual Oscars.

Even more interesting is the way in which this digital code has transcended the realm of social media and is creeping into other forms of communication. I've started noticing hashtagged phrases written out in emails, I spotted a women's athletic shirt with #RUN emblazoned on the front, I've even seen friends use hand gestures to mimic the symbol during in-person conversations. Forget to brush your hair and put on mascara in the morning? Your au naturel look means you're having a #nofilter kind of day.

Hashtags serve no practical function in these forms but there's evidence of a growing trend; social media language is migrating away from its intended platform and starting to infiltrate our speech patterns in interesting (albeit sometimes annoying) ways.

We employ these digital hieroglyphs to add new levels of meaning to our conversations, to offer a clever aside, qualify what we're really trying to say, or underscore our sentences with an additional layer of emotion.

Some of the best hashtag phrases add a sardonic undertone of mocking, because we all know people who deserve to have #whitegirlproblem or #humblebrag shouted at them from time to time.

Away from the keyboard and stripped of its digital functionality, the ubiquitous symbol is becoming increasingly prevalent in face-to-face communication. Who can forget Jack Layton's best dad-joke moment when he referred to Prime Minister Stephen Harper's crime policies as "a hashtag fail."

Some lament the lazy nature of the hashtag, arguing that this idle form of expression is destroying our ability to communicate properly along with other digital shorthand devices such as text-message abbreviations, LOL-speak and emoticons. But anyone who has ever picked up a Shakespeare play knows that dialects evolve over time. We've created a modern hybrid language in blending our spoken and typed words and symbols and, like it or not, the hashtag seems like it's #heretostay.

Gasp! It's time to come up for air

New York artist Jason Hackenwerth starts work on a giant balloon sculpture named Pisces inside the National Museum of Scotland, in Edinburgh on Monday.

When complete, the sculpture will span three floors of the museum and is designed to represent the natural world.

"Even when I'm in my studio day after day, it always feels full of new possibilities," Hackenwerth says of his art.

He says he uses balloons as a medium because they are accessible to a wide audience and often take people back to their childhood.

Lincoln

Director. Steven Spielberg

Stars. Daniel Day-Lewis, Sally Field, David Strathairn

Neither the title-implied biopic nor an assault on the tear ducts, Steven Spielberg's Lincoln serves history by favouring background over foreground. Daniel Day-Lewis's Oscar-winning portrayal of the 16th U.S. President is grounded on the complex humanity of the man, one forced by circumstances to deal not only with epochal national concerns — slavery and the Civil War — but also pressing family ones. His Abraham Lincoln is grey of hair and beard, walks with a slight stoop and speaks in a higher register than our mind's ear may wish to hear. He's capable of thunder — we see glimpses — but he frequently comes across as timorous, in his dealings not only with political foes and allies but also with his high-strung wife Mary (Sally Field) and headstrong son Robert (Joseph Gordon-Levitt). Scripted by Tony Kushner (TV's Angels in America, Spielberg's Munich) the film loosely adapts Doris Kearns Goodwin's non-fiction best-seller Team of Rivals: The Political Genius of Abraham Lincoln. It finds focus in the marrying of high principles with low politics.

Same old Lil Wayne

New album.
Forget the story line — rapper's strength still lies in his lyrical zingers

Lil Wayne's I Am Not a Human Being II album opens with a familiar sound — someone's flicking a lighter. It's Weezy's sonic signature, a long-running nod to the weed, women, booze and bravado that has shaped so many of his musical releases, including his latest.

Now on his 10th album, singles like No Worries and the Mike WiLL Made It-produced B—s Love Me suggest that Wayne's priorities haven't changed. Luckily for fans, he covers familiar territory with fresh, tweet-worthy punchlines.

But if you're looking for storytelling, look elsewhere. Wayne's expertise is in lyrical zingers.

He unleashes a dazzling array on the 2 Chainz-assisted Rich as F—, which features a standout, swaggering beat from producer T-Minus. "AK on my night stand, right next to that Bible/But I swear with these 50 shots, I'll shoot it out with 5-0/Pockets gettin' too fat, no Weight Watchers, no lipo," Wayne raps.

His performance on the song may very well convince on-the-fence fans that the YMCMB captain still has passion for his craft.

He's entertaining on Trippy, one of two tracks produced by Juicy J and Crazy Mike. "I got high, and fell asleep loaded/I woke up and got high again/OK, I'm reloaded," Wayne raps, making no apologies for his recreational activities.

He's a sinister presence over the equally sinister beat of the production duo's Trigger Finger, and seems to laugh about his 2010 eight-month jail stint on Gunwalk featuring Gudda Gudda.

The songs are reminders of a more focused Wayne — a version of the rapper that seems to be absent from tracks like Curtains, where he phones in lines like "I'm getting cake like I'm Jewish/my n— Drake, he Jewish."

He rages through the heavy metal-influenced Hello, but crossing genres doesn't change the same tired content.

And while the hook on God Bless Amerika promises a more thoughtful Wayne, his verses don't measure up — a disappointment considering his still-revered status as the best rapper in the game.

Overall, Wayne meets expectations for Wayne these days — not saying much (of substance), but giving listeners plenty to talk about.

Four weddings and a few red flags

Jesse James

Jesse James has tied the knot for the fourth time, marrying drag racer Alexis DeJoria in Malibu this weekend after dating for less than two months, according to Star magazine. James' most recent marriage — to Sandra Bullock — ended in divorce in 2010 after his infidelity came to light. DeJoria is the daughter of billionaire Paul Mitchell co-founder John Paul DeJoria, who also helped launch Patron tequila and the House of Blues nightclub chain. "Jesse's always had a man-crush on John Paul, and what better way to get close to him than to get hitched to his daughter?" a source says. "But this marriage will be his fourth. If I were John Paul — after what Jesse put Sandra through — I'd be warning him up front that when it comes to Alexis, he'd better watch his butt."

Lindsay's letting loose before lock up

Lindsay Lohan

Lindsay Lohan is apparently looking to make the most of her time on the outside before her 90-day sentence in a lock-in rehab facility begins. The troubled actress, who accepted her sentence as part of a plea deal last week, reportedly spent the weekend hitting up nightclubs around Southern California. On Friday, Lohan was spotted "drinking Ketel One vodka on the rocks and smoking Parliaments" at San Diego club Fluxx dressed in a Yankees baseball hat and a hooded sweatshirt, according to Us Weekly. And Saturday night found her back in L.A. at Santa Monica's 41 Ocean, where she tried to dodge photographers, according to the Daily Mail. But Lohan has assured her Twitter followers that she's not partying as much as is being reported. "I'm taking this seriously and focused on the road ahead," she wrote before the wild weekend. "Don't believe every thing you hear unless you hear it from me." There's still no word on when Lohan will begin her 90 days of treatment.

Knock off the rumours, the ring is back on

Maybe it's time to put those breakup rumours about Miley Cyrus and Liam Hemsworth away, as the pair have been "inseparable" since Hemsworth got back from his trip to Australia and Manila, according to People magazine. "Since Liam returned to L.A., Miley has been in the best mood. They are together and will continue their wedding plans," a source says. On top of that, Cyrus has been spotted wearing her engagement ring once again.

Too much of something: A reunion recipe that's one Spice short

Spice Girls fans hoping for a reunion will have to be satisfied with the group's performance at the Olympics last summer, as that's it as far as Victoria Beckham is concerned, according to Radar Online. "Victoria has made no secret of the fact her singing days are over, with a hugely successful business and a growing family," her rep says. "She loved her time as a Spice Girl and will always wish the other girls well in whatever they choose to do." And whatever they choose to do may now include doing a reality show in which they search for Beckham's replacement, according to the Daily Mail. "The girls, particularly Geri [Halliwell], think there is so much more that they can achieve, and they know that their fans still want to see them perform," a source says. "She would give anything for this to all work out. She has spoken to TV production companies about how it would work and is very excited. They are gradually getting further down the line." A source close to the band, though, insists that the four remaining members would not recruit a replacement.

Could this alkaline diet change your life?

Mythbusting. Your body shouldn't be high on acid. Victoria Beckham's favourite cookbook, Honestly Healthy, looks at how alkaline-forming foods help you lose weight, be happy and fight insomnia. Metro investigates the claims

ROMINA McGUINNESS
life@metronews.ca

"Our bodies function best when in an alkaline state. Yet, much of our eating trends and diets are very acid-forming in the body, leading to internal stress," Vicki Edgson, nutritionist and co-author of Honestly Healthy, tells Metro.

Why? Because other than in the stomach, which is highly acidic in order to break down food and kill bacteria, everything else in the body runs at an alkaline level.

"All our bodily fluids (blood, serum, urine) are between 7.35 and 7.45 on the pH scale. Matching this alkaline state makes it far easier for the body to digest, absorb and derive energy from the food we consume," she explains.

The author

"Our bodies function best when in an alkaline state. Yet many diets are acid-forming, leading to internal stress."

Vicki Edgson, nutritionist
Author of Honestly Healthy

But certain staples, such as coffee, milk and red meat, score between four to six on the pH scale.

When digested, they form acidic residues in the bloodstream.

"This places a heavier burden on the kidneys and liver to break them down further, as both organs require an increase of certain minerals in order to buffer such acidity," warns Edgson.

Edgson makes sense and Honestly Healthy's recipes are delicious — we've tried them — but are her claims correct?

We asked Amanda Griggs, Nutritional Therapist at the Balance Clinic London (whose clients include supermodel Elle Macpherson) to weigh in on the claims.

70% alkaline, 30% acidic = balance?

What the nutritionist says: "True! An alkaline diet is basically a healthy one that includes fresh vegetables, fruit, nuts and water but excludes excessive amounts of processed foods, coffee, and alcohol."

Good food will improve a mood

What the nutritionist says: "Alkaline foods such as green leafy vegetables, nuts and seeds are rich in magnesium, folic acid and B vitamins that stimulate and increase serotonin levels."

You'll lose weight naturally

"ninety-nine per cent of people put on weight when they're unhappy and therefore eating inappropriately. But if you feel great, you'll lose any excess body weight anyway," claims Edgson.

What the nutritionist says: "True! Over-acidity can equal weight gain."

Clear skin, shiny hair & better BO

What the nutritionist says: "True! The body neutralizes excessive acids with alkaline minerals such as magnesium and potassium. An excessively acidic diet puts a strain on the organs of elimination such as the colon and skin."

Better sleep/ focus

What the nutritionist says: "True! With a constant onslaught of a high acidic diet that includes stimulants such as caffeine, sugar and alcohol, the body resorts to leaching valuable electrolytes such as calcium, magnesium, potassium and sodium from vital organs and blunt valuable hormones, which we need for restful sleep."

An apple a day keeps disease at bay

Health standards. More than half of Canucks aren't meeting the minimum healthy eating recommendations

Canadians are living longer. But not necessarily healthier. On average, we'll spend our final 10 years with sickness and disease. We can change this.

The choices we make now can help shape a future of strength and vitality.

To shrink that 10-year gap, the Heart and Stroke Foundation recommends being physically active, eating well, being smoke-free, reducing stress and avoiding excessive drinking.

Food for thought nutrition is one of the most important things you can do to improve your health — yet more than half of Canadians don't meet the healthy eating recommendations.

Eating a poor diet results in nearly three quality years of life lost, while being obese can reduce your life span by almost four years.

To start on the path to shrinking the 10-year gap, take these tips to heart.

Embrace the rainbow
Eat between five and 10 servings of vegetables and fruit each day. Choose a variety of colourful vegetables and fruit.

Get the guide
Make Canada's Food Guide your bible to plan well-balanced meals with sensible portion sizes.

Shake the salt habit
Instead, spice things up with fresh or dried herbs.

Banish temptation
Skip the snack aisle at the grocery store.

Counter the snack attack

Spring a leek today

Any day now we are going to start seeing a spring crop of leeks.

And, like the middle child, they do require some effort (sorry middle kids) but pay dividends in the end.

Clean them up, treat them properly and you will never look back to plain old onions again.

- When cleaning leeks, it is best to cut them lengthwise into semi cylinders rather than rings. Cold running water between the layers removes the grit better so you won't feel like you are eating a sandbox.
- Pan fry in butter with high heat to help brown and crisp the delicate fibres or they can become a slimy mush.
- Think about cooking a double batch and storing in the fridge to top soups, pastas and pizzas all week long much like caramelized onions ... only better.

Leeks provide more vitamin C, iron, Vitamin A and fibre than an equal amount of onion, but their unique, milder flavour really hits home on a cold, rainy day.

Redefine fast food with Foil Pack Salmon

Bake an extra filet for tomorrow's lunch. MAIJA MOMENTS OF YUMMYMUMMYCLUB.CA

MAIJA MOMENTS
YummyMummyClub.ca

Ingredients

- Non-stick cooking spray
- 1/2 lemon, sliced into 4-6 rounds depending on size
- 1 salmon fillet (approx. 4-6 oz) (skin on or off)
- Drop of olive oil
- 2 sprigs fresh dill
- Handful of green beans, washed and ends sliced off
- Coarse salt to taste

1. Spray one side of your tin foil piece with non-stick cooking spray (tin foil should be large enough to hold and fold over your salmon fillet).

2. Place lemon rounds in middle of tin foil in a rectangle. Place salmon on top of lemons and brush with olive oil. Top with dill and green beans and lightly salt to taste.

3. Fold tin foil into a foil package so that there are no seams, as you want to make sure there is no way for the steam to escape.

4. Bake on baking sheet in preheated 300 F oven for 25 minutes. Carefully place foil packs onto plates and open to let the steam escape.

I'm sorry for sleeping with your girlfriend, and other apologies

Memoir. Columnist says we try our best but we all mess up — yet we're all deserving of forgiveness

Dave Bry is a professional apologizer, first in a Dear (Person He's Wronged) column online and now a letter-by-letter memoir of messing up and making amends.

Out Tuesday, Bry's Public Apology is stuffed with wrongs, from the foibles of an anxious, surly tween in New Jersey to the regrets of a 20-year-old who drinks and does drugs too much, losing his father to cancer at a crucial time in his youth.

Could you fill a book with apologies? Bry has no trouble.

Through high school in Little Silver, N.J., Bry spends a lot of time apologizing for bad behaviour at school as he set a record for detentions and tried to lose his virginity. He succeeds with the girlfriend of a classmate. And he's sorry.

A victim of the recession, the 42-year-old Brooklyn dad of an 8-year-old son started writing his Public Apology column at the culture site The Awl in 2009, as he lost a magazine job and got his freelance writing career off the ground. About 40 per cent of the book is repurposed columns.

Bry hopes others will join him in apologizing — on a Tumblr called the Public Apology Project. Ahead of the book, from Grand Central Publishing, just a handful of people had taken up Bry on his offer of anonymity to set things right in their own lives.

Was the idea for the book to share something of yourself beyond the usual memoir?

I'm a little reluctant to talk about it in terms of getting weight off my shoulders, confessing for the sake of (alleviating) guilt. In my least generous look at it, I'd call it a gimmick. But I relate well to other stories told in the first person, that feeling of, 'Oh man, it could have come out of my own head.' The loftiest goal of the book would be that people might relate to it and remember, 'Oh my god, I remember when I did that stupid, embarrassing thing, and I remember when I was such a jerk and I've been beating myself up about it since.' It's nice to know that other people feel that way.

Were you trying to get in touch with your previous selves?

I think about the stuff that I've done wrong a lot. I'm a real harsh judge of behaviour, probably most harshly my own. I look at my behaviour pretty closely and look back on things and can identify many, many times in my life that I screwed up. I think I've always been looking back five years and thinking, 'Oh my god, thank god I'm not that same person. I was such an idiot.'

Do you have more to apologize for than the average person?

No. The way that I look at it is that we're all pretty much the same, and some of us maybe will feel more guilty about stuff, and maybe get more hung up. I think my northeastern Jewish upbringing made me lean in that direction, toward the kind of Woody Allen, hand-wringing guilt. But I think everyone's equally guilty, except the extreme examples. Basically, I think, we're all trying to do our best in this world, and we all mess up a lot. The flip side is we're all deserving of forgiveness.

Can you claim income tax credits for an infirm family member?

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

Growing issue

2.7 million Canadians care for an elderly family member or friend.

Millions of Canadians are caregivers but are confused about whether they can claim caregiver tax credits for the elderly. This Metro reader is one of them:

"My mother is 80 and lives with me. Her income from OAS and GIS (guaranteed income supplement) is $15,000. She can still do the daily basic necessities but her hearing is poor. I assist her with doctor appointments and ensure she is taking her daily medication. Can I claim any credits?" T.E.

It's a bit of a puzzle because there are three "caregiver" credits under the category, Supporting Other Infirm Adults, meaning other than a spouse.

These include line 305 (amount for eligible dependent), line 306 (amount for infirm adults age 18 or older) and line 315 (caregiver amount).

Line 315 is the most likely credit for you. The caregiver amount is $4,402 for a dependent who is not infirm and $6,402 if the person is infirm. The non-refundable tax credit is phased out when net income exceed s $21,435 for the infirm and $19,435 for those who are not infirm.

Line 305 (amount for eligible dependent) used to be called the equivalent to spouse amount. You must be single and have your mother living with you. This credit is phased out when net income exceeds $10,822 for those who are not infirm and $12,822 for those who are.

You should talk to your mother's doctor to find out how she might be classified. The definition of infirm is hazy and somewhat subjective. If she's considered infirm, the line 306 tax credit also applies.

Also, if your mother's hearing loss qualifies her for the Disability Tax Credit (DTC), it could be transferred to you to reduce your taxes. A health professional will need to fill out the DTC application form, T2201, at cra-arc.gc.ca/E/pbg/tf/t2201.

Be aware that disability is a specific condition according to the CRA. One can be disabled but not infirm, and vice versa.

Personal finance. Here's how women can take control of their money

Women influence

- 91% of home purchases
- 80% of health spending
- 90% of financial decisions

For more than a century the financial services industry has focused on men as the primary target for individual insurance and retirement savings.

According to a study by the Boston Consulting Group, Canadian women control 67.2 per cent of all household spending. That's a lot of purchasing power in our economy.

"What's interesting is that while many women today are able to assert their independence through their lifestyle and career choices, many still find personal financial planning to be very stressful," said Janey Leslie, a certified financial planner with Desjardins Financial Security.

"Statistically, women live longer than men, they play a key role in family care-giving and decision-making, but they are often in a more vulnerable financial position. So it's essential that women create a financial plan that can support their current and future needs and lifestyle."

First, think about what you would need financially to protect your family in case of an emergency such as an illness or a job loss.

Second, know where your money's going. Review your budget to identify any wasteful spending and make a goal of paying down your debt once and for all.

Third, create a savings plan for your retirement and for a rainy day

Fourth, review your life insurance coverage. Products like disability insurance, extended medical insurance and critical illness insurance allow you to focus on healing.

Tiger climbs back atop the mountain in world rankings

PGA. Woods cruises to win at Arnold Palmer Invitational to take No. 1 spot from McIlroy

Tiger Woods is back to No. 1 in the world with a game that looks as good as ever.

Woods walked off the 18th green Monday waving his putter over his head — his magic wand this week at Bay Hill — to acknowledge the fans who have seen this act before. He won the Arnold Palmer Invitational for the eighth time to tie a PGA Tour record that had not been touched in 48 years.

This win had extra significance. It returned Woods to the top of the world ranking for the first time since the final week of October 2010, the longest spell of his career.

"It's a byproduct of hard work, patience and getting back to winning golf tournaments," he said.

Woods never let anyone closer than two shots in the final round at Bay Hill that was delayed one day by storms. With a conservative bogey he could afford on the last hole, he closed with a 2-under 70 for a two-shot win over Justin Rose.

Next up is the Masters, where Woods will try to end his five-year drought in the majors.

Woods fell as low as No. 58 in the world as he coped with a crisis in his personal life and injuries to his left leg. One week after he announced he was dating Olympic ski champion Lindsey Vonn, Woods celebrated his third win of the season, and his sixth going back to Bay Hill a year ago.

"Number 1 !!!!!!!!!!!!" Vonn tweeted moments after his win.

Like so many other victories, this one was never really close.

Rickie Fowler pulled to within two shots with a 25-foot birdie putt on the 14th hole, but after he and Woods made bogey on the 15th, Fowler went at the flag on the par-5 16th and came up a few yards short and into the water. Fowler put another ball into the water and made triple-bogey.

Fowler had to settle for a 73 and a tie for third with Mark Wilson (71), Keegan Bradley (71) and Gonzalo Fernandez-Castano (72).

Rory McIlroy had been No. 1 since he won the PGA Championship last August. He can reclaim the No. 1 ranking by winning the Houston Open this week. Woods heads home to south Florida for two weeks before the Masters.

He was never very giving of himself. Having returned to the top on his knees, Tiger Woods gives nothing any more.

"How does it feel, after all this time?" Woods was asked, seconds after winning the Arnold Palmer Invitational. If ever there was a moment to look back from the top and appreciate the difficulty of the climb, this seemed like it.

"It's a byproduct," Woods said evasively, and with an odd hint of menace. "A byproduct of hard work."

The game has returned, but the swagger that once accompanied it is gone. Woods is 37 years old. He looks younger. He plays older. GO TO METRONEWS.CA/VOICES FOR MORE FROM CATHAL KELLY ON TIGER WOODS.

Ben D'Aguilar likes being different.

So when the McMaster Marauders' colourful defensive end met with CFL officials during the league's combine on the weekend, he made sure his answers were honest and from the heart and not necessarily sugar-coated for their benefit. It was all part of the six-foot-two, 240-pound Hamilton native's master plan to be his own man during the two-day audition.

"I love being different, I don't want to be regular," D'Aguilar said following Sunday's 1-on-1 drills at Varsity Stadium in Toronto. "A lot of guys might switch their answers based on who they're talking to, but I'm always me.

"I'm not just a fun guy all the time. I have a lot of aspects to my personality."

Test results are important to officials but many put a lot of stock in the 1-on-1 interviews with prospects. It's an opportunity for them to get close and personal with the men who one day could don their team's colours.

"The interviews are a huge process for us because we try to get inside the kid and find out what motivates them," said Scott Milanovich, the head coach of the Grey Cup-champion Toronto Argonauts. "For me, that might even be the most beneficial part of the weekend.... The interview is important." THE CANADIAN PRESS
